From Meadville to Sierra Leone: educating and transforming lives through faith and literacy

Nov 7, 2025 Meadville Tribune by Rich Green

Imagine living in a remote African village of 250 people. There's little electricity, few vehicles, and only three people can read or write. There's a mosque but no church. You dream of teaching the children to read and to know Jesus, yet you can't afford teacher training.

That's the kind of need that the nonprofit Transformation Education, founded by Meadville native Gwen Smith, is working to meet in Sierra Leone, West Africa.

Smith, a daughter of Melvin and Kathy Smith and a graduate of Calvary Baptist Elementary School and Meadville Area Senior High, first moved to serve full-time in Sierra Leone in 2007 after volunteering with Mercy Ships. What began as one teacher's step of faith has grown into a network mentoring educators to bring literacy and the Gospel to unreached communities.

"Our mission is to help people know, love, and live God's Word," Smith said.

The Sierra Leone team recently completed the sixth year of summer Bible and literacy training. Now, during the school year, they mentor, evaluate, and lead in-service trainings. Here in the U.S., volunteers are supporting and praying for at least $30,000 in new annual funding to expand Sierra Leone staff and reach more schools.

"Our vision is to help Christian educators reach thousands of children with both literacy and the Gospel — especially in places where Christ is not known," Smith said.
